STEAM ECHOES OF HAMILTON

Ian Wilson

by Ian Wilson

Until someone invents a time machine, the best way to visit the railway operations of yesteryear in Southern Ontario is through the pages of Ian Wilson's books. Take a trip back to the past in the vicinity of Hamilton, Ontario, steel manufacturing centre of Canada. In addition to the variety of industrial switching and downtown operations, you will enjoy exploring the Hagersville Subdivision southward from Hamilton. Take a branchline train ride through Caledonia and Jarvis to the scenic north shore of Lake Erie. Watch the small engines and mixed trains amid the scenic surroundings of Simcoe, Port Rowan and Port Dover. Take advantage of this time-limited discount and arrange delivery of a signed copy to your door. Pre-ordered books will be shipped on a first-in, first-out basis starting in early November 2008.

CNR operations from the Steel City southward in the 1950s
